SCHOOL REPORT.

To the Citizens of Kensington:—

The close of another year brings with it the duty of the Board of Education to present to the town a brief report of the school.

The number of children in town April 1, 1890, between five and fifteen years of age, as enumerated by the selectmen, was 82.

The whole number attending school during the year, was 92.

At the close of the spring term, Miss Hillard and Miss Batchelder gave up school work, and have since been married. Miss Lamprey resigned to accept a position in a neighboring town. We regretted to part with faithful teachers.

The changes which occurred during the remainder of the year at the North school were unavoidable. Miss Amy Sanborn began work in the fall, but early in the term resigned on account of sickness at home. After two weeks' "substituting" by Miss Webster, the services of Mrs. Flora Hilliard were secured to complete the term. Miss Fannie Sanborn completed the work of the year. Miss A. L. Dow, a teacher of many years' experience, took charge of the West school during the fall and winter. Miss Lamprey was succeeded at the East school by Miss Green of the board of education.

While the progress made during the year is not so great as could be desired, much good work has been done.

Irregularity of attendance has contributed somewhat toward hindering the greatest advancement. Some one has wisely said, that "the only legitimate causes which can morally excuse parents from sending their children regularly to school, are sickness and domestic affliction."

But the wisest of teachers, of themselves, can not make a good school. There must be pupils, constant in attendance, diligent, and self-reliant, and with this, there must be parental interest and co-operation. Teachers and pupils would both be encouraged by frequent visits of parents. The most enthusiastic teachers and the most ambitious pupils will lose much of their energy if their labors excite no interest beyond their school-room. The school registers show that very few visits were made by parents until the close of the term, during the past year.

The free text-book law has been in operation in this state for one year. Philadelphia has furnished the school-children of that city with free text-books for seventy years; New York has done the same for fifty years, and other cities and towns of other states have tried the system for many years. Arguments in its favor and arguments against it have been often repeated. Experience has confirmed the former and refuted the latter. With the adoption of the free text-book law, much additional work is required of teachers. A record must be kept of all books loaned, and supervision must be constant regarding the use and care of the books in the hands of pupils. Without such work on the part of teachers, a large expense will be incurred annually for the purchase of new books to replace those abused.

Finally, let the schools be judged according to the good they have accomplished, not according to the imperfections that remain. If any would criticise, let them visit the schools more; let them observe and reflect upon the labor that is to be performed, and the many difficulties that surround the position of a teacher. After having considered all the varied and often conflicting interests that must be considered, if they can see clearly any better way, let them kindly suggest it to those in charge of our schools, who make no claim to perfection, and who are always desiring to make the "privileges of tomorrow better than those of to-day."
